Criteria:

The above-mentioned trade name product and its component INCI have been assessed against the CFI criteria and definitions[1] for the “Leaping Bunny Certification”.

Based on the available information it is up to the producer of the finished cosmetic product to define the suitability of the final cosmetic product against the Cruelty Free INTERNATIONAL criteria.

BASF considerations:

1. For ‘cosmetic purposes’ according to EC 1223/2009 no animal tests for cosmetic ingredients have been performed after the deadline March 11th 2009 and the extended deadline March 11th 2013, as this could result in a marketing ban for the final cosmetic product.
2. Only active ingredients defined as chemical substances or compounds defined by its INCI or CAS number that is required to be listed on the label of the final cosmetic product (as per EC 1223/2009) will be considered.
3. Reported study dates are predominantly “end of in-life phases” of the test animals.
4. For additional information on animal-based or animal-derived ingredients, please refer to QRPI, certificate of origin.
5. Due to the complexity of information, status corrections at a later date cannot be excluded and no responsibility for the consequences can be assumed by BASF.
6. The statement has a validity of 12 months from the issue date onwards.
